RVH SEEKS PUBLIC INPUT

Royal Victoria Regional Health Centre (RVH) is seeking input from the public regarding its strategic plan. In 2013, RVH introduced its MY CARE strategic plan – a roadmap to guide the organization through to 2020. In order to ensure the ongoing success of this patient and family-centred strategy, RVH is reviewing the plan with the assistance of staff, patients and the public.

“When we launched our MY CARE plan in 2013, we did so after broad consultation and engagement with staff, physicians, health care partners, patients and the public,” says Janice Skot, RVH president and CEO. “The incredibly valuable feedback we received help us shape and define our plan as well as our vision, mission and values. Our plan is what guides us every day and its important to evaluate our progress, reflect on our achievements and, most importantly, build on our momentum in the years ahead.”

In order to gather public input, RVH has posted a short survey on the home page of its website www.rvh.on.ca. Members of the public are invited to complete the survey. The answers compiled will guide RVH’s direction over the next four years.

The survey will remain available until March 18.
