RVH celebrates ‘little miracles’ with a chime

Royal Victoria Regional Health Centre (RVH) has introduced a new way to celebrate the birth of a baby with the sounding of a lullaby chime over the paging system.

The idea was brought forward by nurse Laura Dix of RVH’s Post Anesthetic Care Unit as a way not only to acknowledge the miracle of birth, but to bring a smile to those who hear it.

“We always say miracles happen every day at RVH and this is a way to celebrate our tiniest miracles,” says Janice Skot, president and CEO. “Our health centre is a busy, bustling place, and we are often treating very ill patients. This lullaby chime provides us the opportunity to pause and reflect on the many good things that happen here too.”

Each year, approximately 2000 babies make their debut at RVH.
